New Vistas is an intensive, hospital diversion program, serving children and youth, ages 5-18½, in Lakewood, Colorado.

Jefferson Hills, a not-for-profit, 501(c)(3), has been serving Colorado’s adolescents with emotional and behavioral needs since 1993.

Our Approach
Each child/youth will receive a comprehensive assessment examining biological, psychological, family, and learning/school issues that contribute to the child/youth’s emotional and behavioral problems.

Each child/youth will have a customized treatment plan based on the assessment, working with the child/youth and family to use treatment strategies based on scientific evidence and compassionate care.

We will help the child/youth and family use the treatment time as a unique opportunity to better understand each other and leave with a positive experience and stronger plans for safety and future success.

We view the New Vistas stay as being part of a continuum of care that is best met through community-based services. This means coordinating assistance in the community to ensure both a successful transition and continued success in the community. Working closely with the professionals involved in those settings is crucial to this endeavor.
